5.3.1. General Definitions

Traditional roles and responsibilities of faculty members in major universities focus on three categories: teaching, research/scholarship and service.

Listed below are definitions for teaching, research/scholarship, and professional service as they pertain to the faculty in the Department of Teaching and Learning at UNLV. If progress in the areas that are considered for tenure and promotion is not evident, then these concerns must be shared with the candidate during eighteen-month and mid-tenure reviews.

A. Teaching

Teaching is an activity or function performed by a faculty member on behalf of students and their learning. It includes (a) course instruction (b) advising and mentoring (c) all planning and related program and curricular endeavors, (d) supervision of students including directing field experiences of students in practica, internships, or other comparable clinical and field-based activities, (e) directing dissertations, theses, and professional papers, and (f) all communication and coordination activities related to instruction.

B. Research/Scholarship

Research is broadly defined as those activities associated with the systematic collection, analysis, and dissemination of information or data for the generation or verification of new knowledge; the formulation of theories, models, or philosophies that stimulate the thinking and research of others; or the development of processes and procedures for practitioners based upon current empirical data or theory. Included under research are studies that involve laboratory, field, clinic, library, and other creative endeavors. Competence and accomplishment must be documented.

C. Professional Service

Professional service is defined as those activities that provide assistance to the Department of Teaching and Learning, the College of Education, the University, and to professional clients in the field and in the profession generally. Included under professional service are contributions to local, state, regional and national committees: helping schools and other organizations plan, organize, conduct, or review programs appropriate to the area of specialization; advocacy of educational policies or leadership in groups devoted to such advocacy; and appropriate publications that do not fall into one of the research/scholarship categories. It also includes work on all Department, College (School) and University committees, and assignments at all levels of the University.

5.3.2. Eighteen-Month and Mid-Tenure Review

The pre-tenure review process is intended to assist, support, and evaluate tenure-track faculty as they progress toward tenure and promotion in the Department of Teaching and Learning. The process provides feedback to candidates in regard to their performance in teaching, scholarship, and service.

A. Eighteen-Month Review

1. This first review will occur during the fourth (4th) semester of a candidate's employment.
2. The intent of this review is to assist and support the candidate in the early stages of faculty development.
3. The following materials only will be considered at the time of the 18 -month review:
 - a) Current vita.
 - b) All existing annual self-reports.
 - c) All existing annual evaluations by the department chair.
 - d) All existing teaching evaluations.
 - e) Copies of all publications.
4. The chair of the Promotion and Tenure (P & T) committee, along with the candidate's faculty mentor(s), will review the candidate's dossier. Thus, a total of up to four (4) P & T members will meet with the candidate to discuss identified strengths and recognized needs; and to make recommendations to the candidate for enhancing teaching, scholarship, and service. No written feedback will be provided at this me.

B. Mid-Tenure Review

1. This review usually occurs during the sixth (6th) semester of a candidate's employment.
2. This is an evaluative review in the areas of teaching, scholarship, and service.
3. The following materials only will be considered at the time of the mid-tenure review:
 - a) Current vita.
 - b) All existing annual self-reports.
 - c) All existing annual evaluations by the department chair.
 - d) All existing teaching evaluations.
 - e) Copies of all publications.
 - f) A completed NSHE form for tenure/promotion.
4. All members of the P&T committee will review the candidate's dossier. The committee chair will call a meeting of the P&T committee at which members will discuss the candidate's

- dossier after it is presented by the candidate's chosen representative (mentor or faculty designee).
5. A written report will be given to the department chair and the candidate. The report will include the committee's vote and a summary of comments made by members of the committee regarding the candidate's performance.
 6. The candidate may write a response to the committee's report to be included in the candidate's file.

C. Additional Reviews Prior to Require Promotion and Tenure Review

Once the mid-tenure review is completed, the candidate has the option of requesting additional review. These reviews would be conducted following the same process as the 18-month review.

5.3.3. Promotion To Associate Professor

Refer to:

NSHE Code: (Title 2 Chapter 5)

UNLV Bylaws: (Title 5, Chapter 6, Section 16)

COE Bylaws: (Chapter 4, Section 2.5)

A. Introduction

The Department of Teaching and Learning is committed to the notion that promotion to Associate Professor requires that individuals participate in the three areas of teaching, research/scholarship, and service. According to UNLV Code, a successful candidate must have a record of excellence in either teaching or research/scholarship and at least satisfactory in the other. In addition, the candidate must demonstrate a satisfactory record in service.

UNLV Bylaws specify that an Assistant Professor may be considered for promotion at any time and must be considered for promotion after a period of not more than 6 years in this rank. Candidates typically apply for promotion to Associate Professor at the beginning of their sixth year unless otherwise specified at the time of hire.

Each candidate for promotion to Associate Professor must present a dossier identifying appropriate supporting evidence. COE Bylaws state that the candidate's dossier must contain:

1. The NSHE Recommendation for Tenure or Promotion form ("The Regents' Form").
2. Vita.

3. Mid-tenure Evaluation.
4. Annual Evaluations by Department Chair(s).
5. Summaries of teaching evaluations.
6. Examples of course syllabi.
7. Copies of scholarly work.

Candidates are responsible for providing additional materials to support their activity if requested to do so by the department Promotion and Tenure Committee.

The department will solicit and obtain at least four (4) letters from external referees outside the University, two (2) of which shall be from persons drawn from a list of names suggested by the candidate. Letters will be tagged for review indicating whether the letter came from referees suggested by the candidate or not. There will be no restrictions on relationships between candidates and referees.

A summary of expectations and examples of supporting evidence in each of the three areas of teaching, research/scholarship, and service follows. General expectations also have been defined in Section 1 of this document. The following lists of expectations are not exhaustive; they are intended to provide appropriate guides for the candidates.

B. Teaching

The candidate needs to demonstrate a record of effective teaching. A portfolio or dossier identifying appropriate supporting evidence shall be submitted for review. The items listed below are appropriate for inclusion in the dossier. This does not imply that the candidate must provide evidence in all of the areas identified, nor is the list exhaustive.

1. Copies of syllabi (required).
2. Student ratings of courses taught (required).
3. A record of courses taught during the evaluation period (required).
4. A record of advisement, particularly at the masters and doctoral level (required).

6. Evidence of new strategies, techniques, processes and technologies used in teaching.
7. Evidence of development, teaching, and/or assessment of new courses.
8. Attendance at professional development conferences, workshops and seminars related to the improvement of teaching.
9. Honors and awards for teaching.

10. Peer evaluations of teaching.

C. Research/Scholarship

For promotion to Associate Professor the candidate must demonstrate evidence of continuous quality research or scholarly productivity. The T&L Promotion and Tenure Committee requires that copies of scholarly work be included in the candidate's dossier. Research and scholarly productivity may also be demonstrated by, but not limited to, the following examples of supporting evidence. The list is neither all-inclusive nor exhaustive.

1. Articles published in nationally/internationally circulated, refereed journals.
2. Articles published in nationally recognized non-refereed journals.

9. Research/scholarship or works in progress.
10. Honors and awards for research.
11. Presentations at professional meetings based on research or scholarly projects.

D. Service

Faculty members are expected to engage in both intra-university and extramural service. In evaluating service, emphasis is placed upon evidence of contributions to the department, college and university, the local community and the profession in general. Evidence should include documentation that addresses the quality and impact of service activities. The following list provides examples of supporting evidence. The list is neither all-inclusive nor exhaustive.

1. Chair or membership in program, department, college and university committees.
2. Participation in special university programs.

5.3.4. Promotion To Professor

NSHE Code: (Title 2, Chapter 5)

UNLV Bylaws: (Title 5, Chapter 6, Section 16.5)

COE Bylaws: (Chapter 4, Section 2.5)

A. Introduction

The Department of Teaching and Learning is committed to the notion that promotion to Professor requires that individuals participate in teaching, research/scholarship, and service, and that, in the years under consideration, the candidate demonstrates leadership in these three areas.

It is expected that an individual promoted to Professor would provide for colleagues and students a perspective that is broader than that of the home institution (i.e., the candidate has received recognition beyond the home institution, and this recognition results from contributions made to the profession). This recognition may be demonstrated in a variety of ways through multiple sources of supporting evidence.

UNLV Bylaws specify that:

1. An Associate Professor may be considered for promotion any time and must be considered for promotion after a period of not more than 8 years in this rank.
2. The department will ordinarily solicit at least four (4) letters from external referees outside the University, at least two (2) of which shall be from persons drawn from a list of names suggested by the candidate. There will be no restrictions on relationships between candidates and referees,
3. Any accomplishments relevant to the criteria for promotion occurring any time during the period since the last promotion may be considered, and
4. At the option of the faculty member, consideration for promotion may be waived.

Finally, although the NSHE code does not specify a minimum time in rank as an associate professor the Department of Teaching and Learning recommends that the candidate for Professor typically has:

1. A minimum of 5 years of University level service or significant employment in the private sector since the last promotion, and
2. At least 2 years on the UNLV faculty at the time of consideration unless otherwise specified at the time of hire.

The department will solicit and obtain at least four (4) letters from external referees outside the University, two (2) of which shall be from persons drawn from a list of names suggested by the candidate. Letters will be tagged for review indicating whether the letter came from referees suggested by the candidate or not. There will be no restrictions on relationships between candidates and referees.

A summary of expectations and examples of supporting evidence in each of the three areas of teaching, scholarship, and service follows. Incorporated within each of these areas are appropriate UNLV and COE guidelines already established. This document is intended to provide flexible guidelines for the candidate; it is not intended to be used as a checklist.

B. Teaching

In addition to the criteria identified for promotion to Associate, the candidate for Full Professor should provide evidence of active mentoring and leadership in teaching and advising.

C. Research/Scholarship

In addition to the criteria identified for promotion to Associate, the candidate for Full Professor shall provide evidence of national recognition in scholarship through publications, books, leadership in national professional organizations, research projects, and external funding. Candidates for Professor should demonstrate a programmatic line of research. Evidence of mentoring junior faculty would be considered a positive factor.

D. Service

In addition to the criteria identified for promotion to Associate, the candidate should provide evidence of national and/or international recognition.

5.3.5. Tenure

Refer to:

NSHE Code: (Title 2, Chapter 3)

UNLV Bylaws: (Title 5, Chapter 6, Chapter 1, Section 4.3)

COE Bylaws: (Chapter 4, Section 2.5)

Tenure is one of the more significant investments a university makes in its faculty. Although tenure is not a job guarantee, it does provide due process protection; thus permitting professors the academic freedom so often needed in their teaching and research. The tenure applicant must demonstrate a balance of success in teaching, scholarship, and service. In addition, the college criteria specify that the candidate will display “propitious professional and human relationships with colleagues, students and administrators.”

Although a professor at any rank may be considered for tenure at any time, it is commonly practiced that at the time of consideration the person must be in his/her final year of tenure probationary period. At the Assistant Professor level, the criteria for tenure are essentially parallel to those for promotion to Associate Professor. Tenure and promotion are generally concurrent at that level. For faculty at the Associate level, the criteria are essentially the same, but the probationary period may be shortened for credit given during the hire.

A professor or associate professor with a well-established career and who has received tenured at other accredited universities may be tenured at the time of initial employment provided he/she meets UNLV basic standards and is recommended by a vote of tenured faculty of the appropriate department.

5.3.6. Denial Of Tenure, Promotion, Or Reappointment

Refer to:

NSHE Code: (Title 2, Chapter 5, Section 5.2.3, 5.2.4)

UNLV Bylaws: (Title 5, Chapter 6, Chapter 3, Section 6)

COE Bylaws: (Chapter 4, Section 2.4.3)

5.3.7. Statement Of Due Process

At any point in the tenure and promotion process, if the criteria for teaching, scholarship, and/or service are not evident, concerns shall be shared with the candidate in writing. Due process dictates the following:

1. A documentation of the deficits.
2. A history of events that indicate deficits.
3. A written plan for remediation of documented deficits.
4. An evaluation of the faculty member's corrective action.

Section 6 Merit

- 6.1 Eligibility and procedures for merit shall conform to the College guidelines specified in the COE Bylaws.

Section 7 Procedures For The Screening And Hiring Of New Faculty

- 7.1 Searches will be conducted in accordance with the university adopted procedures. These procedures are described in detail on the Human Resources Website (<http://hr.unlv.edu/search/search-facpro.html>).

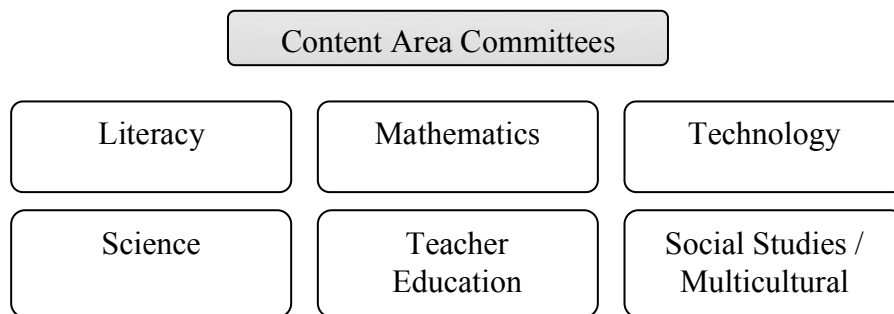

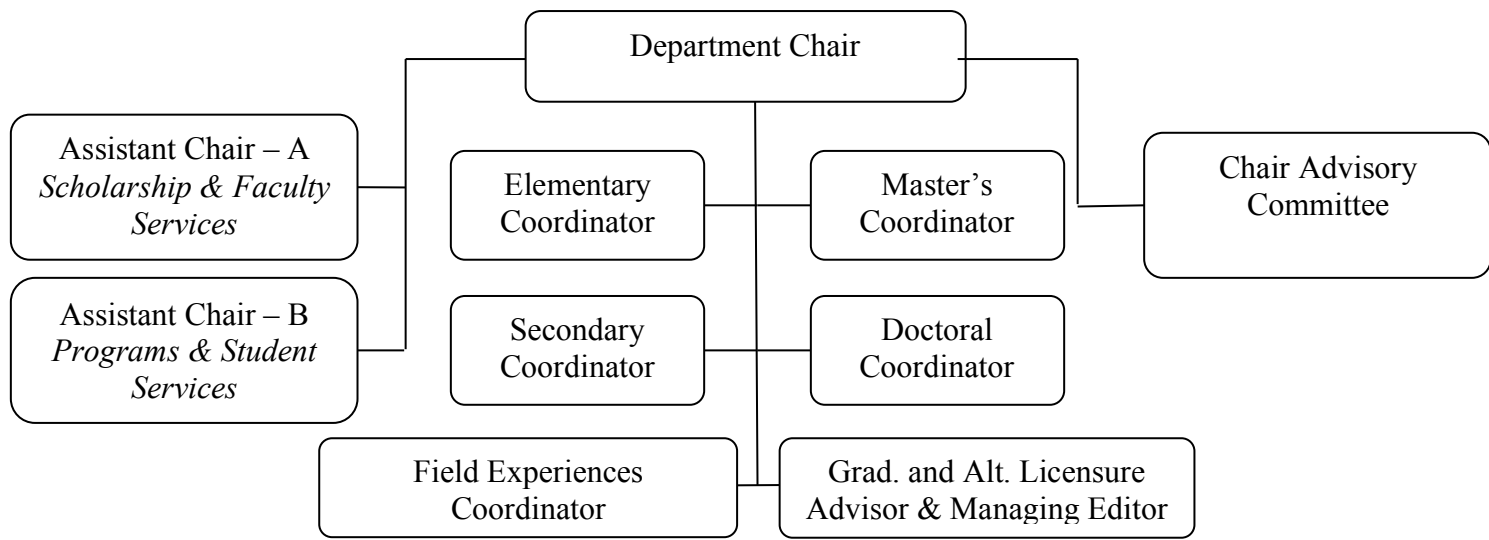

Chapter 5 Bylaws Amendments/Changes

- 1.1 The Articles in this document may be amended or changed by a two-thirds majority of the attending T&L Faculty at a regularly scheduled faculty meeting or two-thirds of those faculty casting a written ballot. Such amendments are to be submitted in writing to the Bylaws Committee

Chair and then to the department Chair for appropriate action. Changes to the appendices require a simple majority of the attending COE Faculty at a regularly scheduled faculty meeting or a simple majority of those faculty casting a written ballot.

- 1.2 Editorial changes required due to action by the Nevada Board of Regents (including approval of modifications of the UNLV Bylaws) or those reflecting administrative fiats of the President or the Provost of the University are to be made by the Bylaws Committee at the time the changes become effective. Since a higher authority mandates these changes, such changes do not require ratification by the T&L faculty.

Appendix A: Teaching and Learning Organizational Structure

Appendix B: Guidelines for Consideration of Merit for Research

Research/scholarship refers to systematic investigations and inquiry. Research activities, whether empirical or theoretical in emphasis, should demonstrate relevance and contribution to the field through peer review. Research involves discovery of new knowledge, critical reflection on existing knowledge, integration of existing knowledge into the extant knowledge base; the development of ideas or products; and the demonstration of impact and dissemination through instruction, publishing, and presentations at professional conferences.

To clarify the relative importance of scholarly products, products are grouped into primary, secondary, and tertiary categories. In general, books, book chapters, and empirical or theoretical journal articles in refereed journals receive greater consideration than articles in non-refereed journals, newsletters, research reports to private or public institutions, conference proceedings or other work not subjected to editorial review. Candidates' annual review document may include a combination of products considered to be of primary, secondary, or tertiary importance. Greater consideration will be given to products of primary importance. Junior, non-tenured faculty members are encouraged to focus the majority of their scholarly efforts toward activities within the primary importance category with emphasis on peer-reviewed articles.

The individual faculty member is expected to distinguish for the merit committee whether works are refereed (a blind peer review process), reviewed (reviewed by a professional/editorial process but not by a blind anonymous peer review process), or invited (the author was requested to write a manuscript, make a presentation, or present a paper, because of her/his known expertise in a given area). Reviewed publications would be listed with refereed ones but the refereed publications will be designated with an asterisk. Greater consideration is given to refereed works, followed by those that are reviewed, and finally those that are invited. In the case of multiple authorship, candidates are expected to follow guidelines regarding order of authorship found in the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (5th Edition), which states "The general rule is that the name of the principal contributor should appear first, with subsequent names in order of decreasing contribution." P. 351.

Examples of research and scholarly products grouped by level of importance include:

Primary Importance:

- Articles (empirical or theoretical) published in high quality, refereed journals as defined by the candidate's field (Targeted Journals)
- Authored (empirical or theoretical) academic books
- Edited academic/professional books
- Refereed or reviewed chapters (empirical or theoretical) in edited academic/professional books
- PI or Co-PI on major research grants/contracts and fellowships from external sources that generate revenue through indirect cost generation, buyouts for faculty, and/or support for graduate assistantships
- Peer reviewed international/national conference presentations

Secondary Importance:

- Regents/University/College Research Award
- Articles published in refereed professional journals (Other Journals)
- Textbooks/Monographs
- Significant distribution of curriculum/training materials, media, software

- PI or Co-PI on research grants/contracts and fellowships from external sources that do not generate primary revenue
- Major research grants/contracts (e.g., NSF, Department of Education) submitted to external sources but not funded
- Invited international/national conference presentations
- Peer reviewed regional conference presentations

Tertiary Importance:

- Minor research or internal funded grants and contracts
- Book reviews
- National association newsletters
- Essay reviews in national academic journals
- Articles in national non-refereed journals and publications
- Articles in editor reviewed publications
- Presentations at state conferences
- Technical reports to sponsors
- Prefaces, introductions, catalogue statements, dictionary entries, etc.
- Nomination for research award (non self nomination)

Targeted Journals

Scholarly activities generally lead to results such as publications, presentations, grant activity, etc. While these are not the only way scholarly activities become represented, journal publication is recognized as a key component. Thus, it is important for T&L to define the parameters of quality journal publications. Other aspects of scholarship will be addressed in subsequent documents.

For a department as diverse as T&L, assessing the relative quality of publications is fraught with challenges. Our faculty publish in a broad range of curricular areas. However, there are important reasons to identify characteristics of publications that the faculty might consider when assessing the value a contribution.

1. By identifying and publicizing these characteristics faculty assessments of individuals in decisions regarding promotion, tenure and merit in the area of scholarly publications can become more consistent and reliable.
2. By identifying and publicizing these characteristics junior faculty members can make more informed decisions regarding scholarly publications.

When identifying targeted journals content groups will generally consider the following characteristics:

- Nature of submission
 - o Invited
 - o Author initiated
- Nature of review
 - o Peer
 - o Editor
 - o Not reviewed
- Article characteristics

- Type of article (primary emphasis)
 - Original research
 - Theoretical
 - Issue introduction
 - Theory to practice
 - Review of literature
 - Commentary
 - Book review
- Number of times cited
- Length
- Authorship
 - Number of authors
 - Author order
- Journal reputation
 - Editor
 - Editorial review board
 - Intended audience
 - Indexed
 - Acceptance rate
 - Sponsorship / affiliation
 - Journal history

The discussion of a listing of journals is the purview of content areas. These listings included targeted journals that are identified using the criteria described above.
